Pure Moral Philosophy-What Reason Demands

- ♦ "...every empirical element is not only quite incapable of being an aid to the principle of morality, but is highly prejudicial to the purity of morals, for the proper and inestimable worth of an absolutely good will consists just in this, that the principle of action is free from all influence of contingent grounds, which alone experience can furnish... To behold virtue in her proper form is nothing else but to contemplate morality stripped of all admixture of sensible things and of every spurious ornament of reward or self-love. How much she eclipses everything else that appears charming to the affections, everyone may readily perceive with the least exertion of his reason, if he be not wholly spoiled for abstraction."
